PRESIDENT VETOES THE POSTAL BILL

WASHINGTON, June 7. — President Coolidge today vetoed the postal pay bill, providing increases in the salaries of all postal employes.

The president has written a lengthy message to congress explaining the veto. This will be sent to the capital during the afternoon. The fact that the legislation would have added $75,000,000 a year to the expenses of the post office department caused Mr. Coolidge to refuse to approve it.

The president's veto message was sent to the senate which received it at 12 o'clock noon.

JAPANESE CABINET RESIGNS

TOKIO, June 7—The Japanese cabinet, headed by Premier Kiyoura, resigned today. It had been in power since January 7.

WASHINGTON, June 7—Resignation of the Japanese cabinet may cause some delay in the forwarding of the American reply to the Japanese exclusion protest, it was said at the state department today.

The text of the note has been completed by Secretary of State Hughes, but he planned to confer with Masanao Hanihara, the Japanese Ambassador, before tendering it forward to Tokio.

TOKIO, June 7—Two main causes contributed to the retirement of the Kiyoura government.

1—Defeat of the political group supporting Premier Kiyoura in the general election.

2—Enactment of the Japanese exclusion law by the United States and abrogation of the "gentlemen's agreement" between America and Japan.

Opposition to the government had bitterly criticised it for the conciliatory course it had followed since the United States congress executed the law to exclude Japanese from that country.

While retirement of the government had been anticipated for a fortnight the actual act of resignation came suddenly. It had been expected that the Kiyoura cabinet would remain in power over the week-end.

There was a common agreement among the leaders that the cabinet should remain in power until after the conclusion of the official celebration of the marriage of the Prince Regent Hirohito. This came to an end Friday morning.

The premiership may be offered to Viscount Takaaki Kato.

LOCAL YOUTH UNDER HEAVY BOND IN IND.

Obstruction Placed on Penna. Railway Track, Derailing Motor, Injuring Workman

OTHERS ARE FREED

Is Bound Over to Circuit Court; Railway Officer is Here Investigating Affair

Emmet R. Sturtz, Coshocton young man was arraigned in Ft. Wayne, Indiana, recently and was found guilty of obstructing a railroad track near Arcola, Indiana, on May 29, 1924, it was learned today from I. O. Stoffer Dennison Heut-of the Pennsylvania railroad, who tenant police for the local division is investigating the matter here.

Orloff Graham Harold Ross and Edwin B. Wilson, all of Coshocton, and Fred Kelly, of Union City, Indiana, were also taken into custody at Arcola but were dismissed when it was found that they took no part in putting thhe obstruction on the track.

According to the information furnished by stoffer, the four Coshocton boys left here on May 26, going to Canton, Ohio, in an automobile. There, according to their stories they disposed of their car and headed west to work in the harvest fields, travelling by way of freight trains

At his hearing Sturtz said that he was put off the train by a conductor who did not bother the others. Angry at having been treated in this manner, he placed an iron brake beam on the track three miles east of Arcola, it is charged. His act resulted in the derailment of a motor car, and injury of William Sitton, a section foreman.

Graham Ross, Wilson and Kelly had apparently alighted from the train soon after Sturtz had been forced to get off. When search was made for them they were found in a tool shed.

After having been found "probably guilty," Sturtz was bound over to thhe circuit court under $3,000 bond. The other young men were released and told to stay off of the Pennsylvania right-of-way.

BLOW ON HEAD BELIEVED TO HAVE CAUSED DEATH; AUTOPSY MAY BE HELD

Ralph Hughes, 16, Dies Saturday from Brain Fever—Struck on Head by Baseball—Was Ill Only Three Weeks—Attended School Here

Ralph Hughes, aged 16, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Reiss, 632 1-2 Walnut-st, died Saturday morning at 7 o'clock from what is believed brain fever or encephalitis altho the disease had not been diagnosed by the attending physician.

It is likely that the physician will hold an autopsy to determine the exact cause of the boy's death. He had been ill three weeks.

A few years ago the lad was struck on the back of the head by a baseball and it is believed that this injury may have resulted in brain fever, causing his death.

Ralph was born in Bedford-tp, on September 5, 1907. He resided there with his parents until he reached five years of age and then moved to Roscoe. Later they moved to Coshocton where the boy resided ever since.

He attended school in Roscoe and in this city. At the time he quit school here he was a member of the sophomore class.

Fathers Will Not Use Millions to Frustrate Justice, They Declare

CHICAGO, June 7.—The skirmishes in psychology, developing as a prelude to the trial of Nathan F. Leopold, Jr., and Richard A. Loeb, on charges of the kidnaping and murder of Robert Franks displayed two new phases today on statements by the prosecution and the fathers of the accused youths. Natham F. Leopold, Sr., and H Loeb. Whose fortunes are $15,000,000, knocked down reports of an initial defense fund of $1,000,000 and predictions of an array of counsel such as no trial west of New York has ever brot together.

It was their first public utterance since their sons' confessions brot them face to face with charges for which the penalty is death.

The state on the other hand, showed again its determination to demand two lives for the one that was taken in its announcement that, of young Leopold and Loeb escape the gallows on the murder charge, they will be brot to trial immediately the charge of kidnaping for ransom which, also, is punishable by death Arraignments on both charges are set for next Wednesday.

The announcement of the fathers of Leopold and Loeb, promising "only such defense as that which every human being is entitled" for their sons, disclaimed the "slightest intention to use their means to stage "an unsightly legal battle" with an elaborate array of counsel and an array of high priced alienists in an attempt to defeat justice.

Assuming that the facts in this case are substantially as published said the statement, made thru defense attorneys and signed by both the fathers, "then the only proceeding they favor is a simple, solemn investigation under the law touching on the mental responsibility of their accused sons."

It was denied that other counsel retention of one additional local attorney, will be retained to aid with the possible, but not probable Clarence Darrow and Benjamin Bachrach, who have handled the case thus far.

The fee, instead of the million's that the fathers' fortune makes possible, "shall be determined by a committee composed of the officers of the Chicago Bar Association

The statement concluded

"If tthe accused boys are found responsible their families in accordance with their conscious duty toward the community, agree that the public must be fully protected from any further ménace of these boys."

"In no event will thhe families of the accused boys use money in any attempt to defeat justice."

Meanwhile, State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe moved toward the ing cases" which he has announce protection of the "perfect hanged.

Every witness of the many the state has gathered was taken to the locality touched on by his part of the story and photographed there with the intention of indentifying his picture record into the evidence.

Thus, plate number 1 scene number I will show Tony Minke, at the place where he found the body.

"This method is new and I believe, it is practical," said Attorney Crowe. The evidence certainly is admissable."

Marriages and Resignations Aid in Reducing Number of School Teachers

HAVE HEAVIER LOAD

Pence Recommends Same Salaries in View of Added Responsibilities

With practically no reductions in salaries, but with an increase in the teacher load, and a decrease in the number of teachers, the city school board, at a special meeting Friday evening, voted to employ a teaching staff which is believed will be adequate for the coming year, at a saving of approximately $40,000 to the school district.

That a reduction in the expenses of the city schools is necessary was made apparent by the shortage of funds this year and the lack of any prospects for more funds next year. How to economize without impairing the efficiency of the schools is a problem over which board members have been struggling for the past two months.

Acting upon recommendations made by a state school examiner, it was finally resolved to reduce the staff of teachers, and possibly to operate the grade schools on a half time basis. A reduction in the salaries of the teachers was also considered.

Because each teacher will be obliged to shoulder a heavier burden this year, A. C. Pence, superintendent of the city schools, recommended that the same salaries be paid. By so doing, he declared, the danger of losing the city's best teachers would be eliminated. He pointed out that the teacher load in the grades had been raised from 28 to 40 pupils, and in the high school from 20 pupils to 30 or more. He expressed the belief that the teachers are willing to assume a greater responsibility to help the schools thru this crisis, and should be allowed as nearly the same salary as possible

A few minor adjustments in the salaries were recommended by Mr. Pence, in order to make them

Hershberger Shows How Library May Be Put on a Firm Financial Footing

Funds Low Again; Plans Afoot to Transfer Library Property to School Board

Reviving the movement to have the Carnegie Public Library property transferred to the city school board, so that a special levy for funds to maintain the library can be made, State Librarian Hershberger of Columbus met with the school board Friday evening, and pointed out the advantages of that plan.

The sentiment of the board members was in favor of his proposal, and he agreed to meet with the city council in an effort to perfect the plans for such a transfer.

Hershberger was here two years ago, and attempted to obtain similar action at that time, but the work was held up by objections on the part of J. C. Daugherty, at that time city solicitor.

Daugherty feared that the library could not be legally transferred because it was under the jurisdiction of the Carnegie estate.

The change would aid the library financially, Hershberger points out. When it was proposed two years ago, the library was on the verge of closing, and subsequently did close for a short time. A public campaign for funds was made to re-open it. Last year more funds were available, but this year the library is again in difficulties, Hershberger said reports to his department show.

At the present time the library treasury contains $300, and the May bills are unpaid. The monthly pay roll amount to $210, and in addition there are other bills, not including money necessary for new books.

West Coast to Start Making its Own Steel

Industry, Founded on Utah Coal and Iron Deposits, will Cut Eastern Freight Haul

SAN FRANCISCO, June 7—California at last has begun the production of its own steel.

The first block of the precious black metal, signifying the commencement of the divorcing of Pacific Coast manufacturing from Eastern steel mills, is today on display in the San Francisco offices of the Columbia Steel Corporation.

More than 300 tons a day are now being produced by the concern, which was incorporated in 1911, with an initial capitalization of $20,000,000.

Production of the basic industrial element is regarded by business leaders of the entire Pacific Coast as being unusually significant today because of the automatic releasing of Coast manufactures from the bondage of excessive freight rates imposed by the railroads upon the steel heretofore transported from Pittsburgh mills.

Limitless Raw Materials

Utah iron and coal mines are the foundation of the new industry. In that State are what geologists claim to be limitless stores of coal and iron ore—more than enough to render the entire Pacific Coast independent of the Eastern mills and long and expensive trans-continental railroad haule.

Within the past year, since funds for the enterprise were raised, thirty-three coke ovens, coal and iron mines, steel mills at Pittsburgh and Los Angeles and the other links in the vast chain required to market steel in commercial quantities, have been placed in operation

Growth of the Pacific Coast in population and wealth and the increasing importance of the Orient in commerce are assigned by Wigginton E. Creed, president of the company, as the main reasons for its organization

Will Bid for Orient Trade

"Directly our organization becomes perfected we should be able to make a determined bid for the growing business of the Pacific coast and the Orient," said Creed recently.

Leaders of the industry include, in addition to Creed, who is also president of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, men who are nationally known in industrial and financial circles.

Better Period Is Ahead For Land Brokers

DES MOINES, Ia., June 6.—Better days are ahead for the farmers and farm land brokers, William E. Herren, field secretary of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, said in an exclusive interview today.

"In the Middle West the farm land situation is still bad enough, but the worst is over. Debts are largely paid, losses have been taken, and farm prosperity should be on the mend. Most farmers have gone back to work. Work is the one big solution.

"The inflation of after-war conditions has largely disappeared, and farm lands are back, in most cases, to where they were in 1916," he said. "The farmer is in a better position today than he has been since 1920. Farm lands are beginning to sell, and a general spirit of optimism is becoming prevalent in the great farming industry of our country.

"There has been a considerable increase in the sale of farm lands in the past year. While indications are that there will be a definite improvement in the market, this improvement probably will be slow.

Farm Population Decreases

"The decrease in farm population continues in some sections. Only those sections which have diversified farming and are developing new lands are reporting an increasing population on the farms.

"The greatest difficulties now confronting the farmer are the high rates of taxation in proportion to his income, inability to realize adequate proportion of the price paid by the consumer for the farmer's products on account of present methods of marketing, and labor shortage, due to the high prices being paid in the cities for labor.

"The sections which have suffered most from the depression are the one-crop areas. Greater diversification of crops will minimize losses in the future.

"Assistance should be given the farmers in the one-crop sections, particularly the Northwest, but in the future greater stress should be laid upon diversification of crops, and greater success will result."

ANNE STILLMAN. H. P. DAVISON. JR.

Mrs. James A. Stillman has announced the engagement of her daughter, Anne, to H. P. Davison, son of the late H. P. Davison, former partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., and former head of the Red Cross. Miss Stillman is the daughter of James A. Mr. Davison won several valor medals as an aviator in bombing German submarine bases in the World War.

Retired Woman Chairman Will Oppose Cooper

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 6—A desire to represent her home district in congress and there fight for the futherance of the rights of women was responsible for the retirement of Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, of Warren, O., as vice chairman of the national committee, it was revealed today, when Mrs. Upton stated she would oppose congressman John G. Cooper, of Youngstown, for the Republican nomination in the rock-ribbed nineteenth district.

"I'm primarily, a wohman's woman," Mrs. Upton said, revealing her ambition. "When suffrage came in 1920, I was urged to make the race for congress, but I felt, when I was asked to tage over the work of organizing women at national headquarters, that the first obligation was there. Now, others may well carry forward that work, and I feel free to seek a place in congress."

Cooper, former official of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, is considered strongly entrenched in the affections of his district, one of the most heavily industrial in the state. In his four campaigns for office, he has, also, had the united support of the dry forces.

Speculation in womens' circles here today turned to the identity of the woman member of the national committee from Ohio, and keen rivalry was expected to develop for the honor. Mrs. John Gordon Battelle, Columbus, and Mrs. David Tod, Youngstown, both outstanding leaders of Republican women in the state and members of the "big seven", were being mentioned, but other names, also, were brot into consideration. In the hotel parlors and corridors reports that possible combinations might be made, in an attempt to name both as members of the national committee from Ohio, were heard.

So far as the successor to Rud. K. Hynicka was concerned, reports today indicated that it was a case of Louis F. Brush, Marion, East Liverpool and Salem publisher, against the field. Brush was reported to have the powerful support of U. S. Senator Frank B. Willis, and other influential leaders.

U. S. Senator Simeon D. Fess, Yellow Springs former chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee, was reported to have the backing of Hynicka and Walter F. Brown, Toledo.

The Ohio Caucus will probably be held at the Hotel Winton, Monday. Members of the credentials, rules, permanent organization and resolutions committees, as well as members of the national committee, will be chosen. Feeling against the selection of either Senators Willis or Fess on the platform committee, because of their refusal to follow the leadership of President Coolidge, was reported as growing.

Extra!! Boy Brushes Teeth!

THE strong, shining teeth of John Pfalzgraf won him the hundred dollar first prize in New York's Perfect Teeth Contest, which has just closed. Run by the United Neighborhood Houses, whose settlements have 30,000 juvenile members, the contest caused more enthusiastic tooth-washing and polishing than any children ever experienced before. Although half the entrants were girls, the winners of first, second, and third places were boys. When they received their checks, at the hands of Sidney Colgate, for $100, $50, and $25 respectively, plus the added novel prize of a lifetime supply of ribbon dental cream, three more delighted boys were never seen.

"So enthusiastic were the children," says Mrs. Emily S. Bernheim, head of the United Neighborhood Houses, "that some of them actually performed the incredible feat of cleaning their teeth six times a day."

U. S. Second in Fish Industry

NEW YORK, June 6.—The fish crop of the world approximates a billion dollars a year in its cost to the "final consumer." Estimates of the value of the fish "landed" in the principal countries of the world supplied by the United States fish commission to the Trade Record of the National City Bank of New York put the world's total at the latest available date at approximately $780,000,000 per annum Trade Record, an estimate of 25 per cent for the cost of cold storage, transportation and the profits of the wholesalers and retailers it is apparent that the world's fish bill approximates a billion dollars a year.

Most of this $780,000,000 worth of fish landed annually by the fishermen of the world is the product of the oceans. Even in the United States, which with its lakes and rivers has a larger supply of fresh water than most other countries, the value of the fish outturn of the Great Lakes and Mississippi River section aggregates but $11,000,000 out of a total of $86,000,000 reported by the fish commission as the annual "value to the fishermen of the fish landed in the entire country including Alaska. The official estimates of the fish landed in the various sections of the country are: New England States 20 million dollars, Middle Atlantic States 24½ million, South Atlantic States 5 1-3, Gulf States 6½, Pacific States 9 1-3, the Great Lakes 6 1-4, Mississippi River section 4½, and Alaska 10 million dollars. This grand total of $86,000,000 includes about $13,000,000 worth of oysters, most of which are the product of the eastern frontage of the eastern frontage lying beween Virginia and the New England states.

The United States now holds second rank among world countries in the value of its fishery products. A recent tabulation by the fish commission showing the value of the fishery products of the principal countries at latest available dates gives the total value to the fishermen of the fish landed in the United States at $86,000,000, Japan $89,000,000, France $85,000,000, Spain $72,000,000, England and Wales $65,000,000, Russia $50,000,000, Portugal $37,000,000, Greece $28,000,000, Canada $28,000,000, Sweden $23,000,000, Scotland $19,000,000, Denmark $15,000,000, Norway $14,000,000, Germany $11,000,000, and Netherlands $11,000,000.

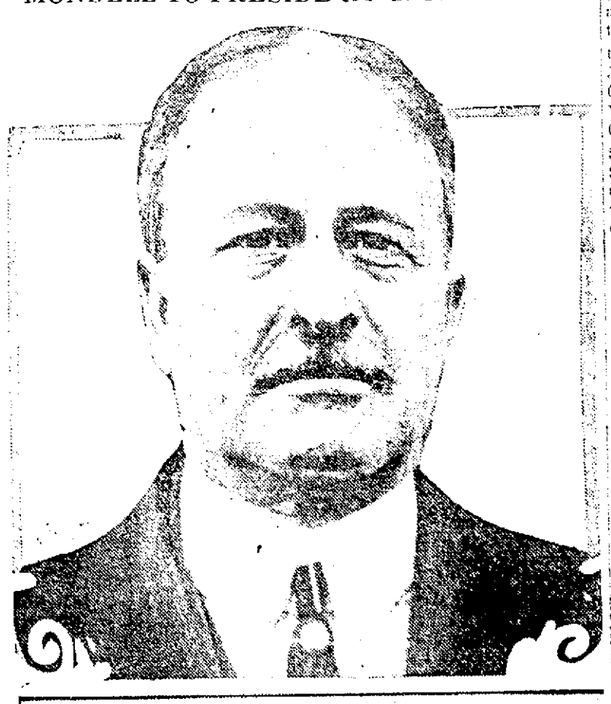

The quantity and value of the food supplied by the waters of the world has greatly increased with the advent of modern methods. Capital now gives close attention to the taking of the fish as well as their preservation and marketing. The capital invested in the United States, exclusive of Alaska, in the mere taking of fish has advanced from $38,000,000 in 1908 to $60,000,000, and the value of the fish landed increased in the same period from $54,000,000 to $70,000,000, altho the number of persons actually employed in the fish industry during those years fell from 141,000 in 1908 to 115,000. Estimates for other parts of the world show a like increase in the value of the outturn and the use of capital.

The chief processes now utilized in the taking of fish as an industry include the steam "trawler" which drags behind it a huge scoop net with a mouth more than 100 feet in breadth—lines several miles in length and carrying several thousand hooks each, and the big purse nets and seines.

A large part of the world's fish crop is taken at comparatively shallow places adjacent to the shores of the continents, and usually designated as "banks", the Newfoundland banks, the banks of the North Sea and those adjacent to Japan. These comparatively shallow places or "banks" are the favorite feeding ground of fish coming often from great distances and furnish a large part of the fish taken for market, tho the classes of fish which seek the shores and fresh waters for spawning purposes also contribute large quantities of this steadily increasing food harvest of the world.

Why Was Columbus Blond?

In the Answer Is the Story of Mankind's Long Journey

Was the "Garden of Eden" in Denmark?
Where did man first get fire?
How did the cave man really make love?
Why did the Indians think Columbus a god?
Did Darwin see the "Flying Dutchman"?

IT'S a long journey from the day, millions of years ago, when a brave savage first stole fire from the cracked rocks near a volcano, to the day, a week or so ago, when Congress passed a new immigration Bill to encourage prospective citizens from Northern Europe and keep out the Japanese.

But there are really very few steps between the color of Columbus' hair and the new immigration regulations. And when you have answered satisfactorily why Columbus had fair hair and blue eyes, you will have the reason for the immigration law and the reason for a great many questions which are bothering the world today—including the Ku Klux, Mussolini in Italy, the Navy's flight to the North Pole, William Jennings Bryan's fight on evolution, the million-year old fossil eggs found in China, the superiority of the Nordic and the Virgin birth of Christ.

Why was Columbus blond? Because, says Johannes Jensen, the Danish novelist, Columbus was of Nordic ancestry. That is, the family of Columbus may have lived in Italy for many generations, but originally his forefathers came from Northern Europe. That is why, instead of being short and dark-skinned and black-eyed, Columbus was tall, fair, blue-eyed.

And in this the scientist agrees with the novelist. Professor Henry Fairfield Osborn of Columbia University and head of the American Museum of Natural History says "Columbus was clearly of Nordic ancestry," adding, "The Northern races include all those peoples who originally occupied the western plateau of Asia and traversed Northern Europe, certainly as early as 12,000 B. C. In the country which they occupied the conditions of life were hard and the struggle for existence was severe. Increasing beyond the power of their own country to support them, they invaded the countries to the south, not only as conquerors but as contributors of strong moral and intellectual elements to more or less decadent civilizations."

This is why the color of Columbus' hair is so significant. The long journey of mankind, which began some fourteen thousand years ago, is still continuing. And today's protests of the Italians against immigration restrictions—their claims for admission because Columbus discovered America—are met by the counter-claim, going back thousands of years, that Columbus did not belong to the same race as the Italians.

Why did Columbus set out on his voyage? To prove the world is round—but also, says Jensen, to seek the "Lost Country." Why did the ancestors of Columbus leave their homelands and sweep southward? To seek the "Lost Country."

And the "Lost Country" is simply the land of men's dreams, the Earthly Paradise the beautiful land which has lived through the ages in the memory of the human race—for the race has a memory, too.

It is this search for the "Lost Country" which is the story of "The Long Journey," written by Johannes Jensen. It is hailed as a great epic, because the novelist took as his character all mankind and as his setting the whole world and as the period all of history. And yet this book, which has stirred Europe, is not an outline or a record of dates, but fiction—a thrilling and fascinating tale in which facts become thrills and myths become realities.

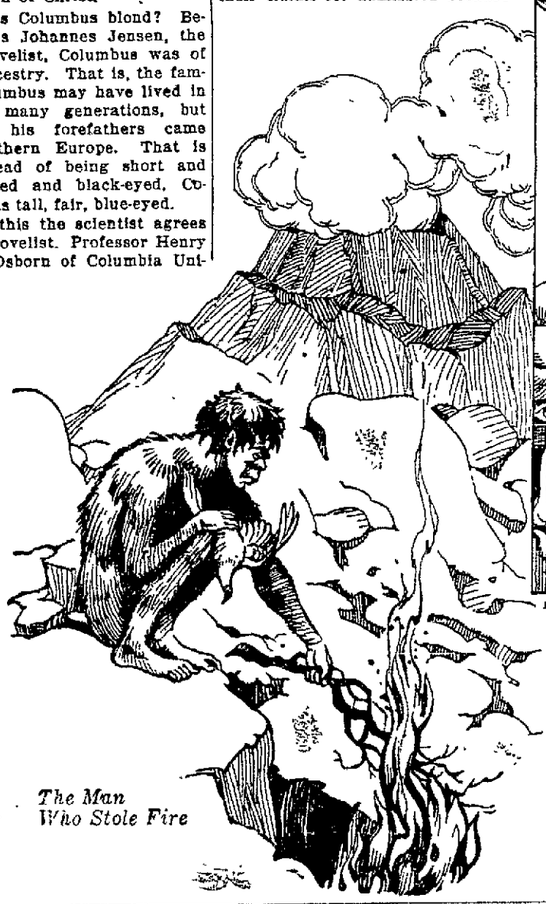

JOHANNES V. JENSEN
Whose "Long Journey" Is the Story of Mankind in Fiction

Christopher Columbus Sails to Find Paradise

May Queen of the Cimbrians

The Man Who Stole Fire

The "Garden of Eden" was not in Mesopotamia but in Denmark, says Jensen in "Fire and Ice," the first volume of "The Long Journey." At the dawn of history the Scandinavian countries were not bleak and cold—they had an almost tropical climate. Here man had his origin, coming "out of the primeval state together with the beasts, shared their life and became transformed with them." The Forest Folk, as Jensen calls these early men, lived in the shadow of Gunung Api, a great volcano, which becomes in mythology a godlike Thunderer and Father of Fire.

Fyr, a young man of the tribe, dares to climb up the sides of the volcano and light some twigs in a crack in the rocks, thus becoming the Prometheus of legend. The tribes of the Forest Folk are each under the complete domination of the Old Man of the Herd—the oldest and strongest of the men—whose word is law and to whom belong all the women of the tribe. As his tribe wanders on Fyr stays behind, singing at his daily tasks. His song on the mountain side attracts many women from the tribe, who come up one by one—until he has a tribe of his own.

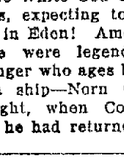

And then comes a vivid picture of an eruption of the volcano, when the tribe, aroused by terror and the thought that Fyr had deceived them, sacrifice him to the flames.

Ages pass and the ice-sheet begins to descend over the land—the winters get colder and longer, and finally the tribe moves farther south. One man stays, Carl, the One-Eyed. He is determined to fight the ice and he learns how to live through the coldest winters. To him comes Mam, a woman, and monogamy begins—and he becomes the Allfather of a new people, the Ice Folk, from whom are descended the Scandinavians. But the memory of the North before the Ice Age has lingered in the souls of men and has become the legend of Paradise, Lost Country.

The men of the Stone Age, seafarers who settle the Danish Islands, come next, and one of them, Norn Gest, is the hero of "The Cimbrians," the second volume of "The Long Journey." His childhood and his later adventures are so intimately described that it is hard to realize that he is a legendary figure, a minstrel who wanders over the earth through the ages.

The Cimbrians lived north of Jutland and were worshippers of a great bronze image of a bull, to which they made human sacrifices and which was tended by vestal virgins. The coming of Spring was celebrated by bonfires and bullfights and the crowning of the "Stranger Maid" or May Bride. Floods cause the Cimbrians to leave their land and travel south until they come into conflict with the Romans, who had begun to degenerate. Against the background of great battles there is the beautiful love story of Vedis, the Cimbrian priestess, and Cheiron, the Greek sculptor.

In this way Columbus' ancestors came to Italy. As explained in the third volume "Christopher Columbus," just published by Knopf, Columbus was of Longobard descent, his family having moved from Lombardy to Genoa on the coast. In Jensen's story he is descended from and named after St. Christophorus, the giant ferryman who became a legendary figure. Christophorus served God by ferrying the migrating tribes across the river on their way south, and one night, the legend says, he carried the Christ child north—symbolizing the spread of Christianity.

The Signature of Columbus

Then the story moves to Palos on the midnight of August 4, 1492, when Columbus prayed in the church before setting sail. Never before has that historic voyage been so described—the admiral pacing the deck, the restless sailors, talk of mutiny, arguments, fears, storms, shooting stars—until Columbus finds Guanahani, instead of the Earthly Paradise he sought, and names it San Salvador.

The White God comes to the Indians, expecting to find them angels in Eden! Among the Indians there were legends of a white stranger who ages before had come in a ship—Norn Gest—and they thought, when Columbus landed, that he had returned.

Columbus in turn became a legendary sungod, Quetzalcoatl, the news of whom traveled inland to the great Aztec empire of Mexico. Here, in the shadow of Popocatapetl, the fiery mountain, dwelt the strange tribe which worshipped the cruel war god Huitzilopochtli with bloody sacrificial rites. When Cortes came they first thought he was Columbus—but they were soon disillusioned. The Aztecs were conquered—and they revolted—and, described in one of the most terrible scenes in fiction, they sacrificed thousands of the conquistadores to their gods at the temple where now stands the Cathedral of Mexico. And through it all we have the fierce passionate story of Malina, the Indian girl who betrayed her people for love of Cortes.

But the long journey continues—Columbus became the ferryman who led new hordes across the Atlantic—people who are finding new lands and homes in America. But his ship, says Jensen, continues to sail—it is "The Flying Dutchman" of the sailors' legend. When it is seen again—by Darwin in 1833 off the southernmost point of South America—it again strikes a fatal hour for Europe.

The Phantom Ship becomes to Jensen the symbol of man seeking happiness in the Lost Country—which he will find in his own heart when he realizes himself. And then, perhaps, mankind will find itself among the stars!

No wonder "The Long Journey" is taking the place of history books! No wonder Johannes Jensen has been hailed as the novelist who has dared to undertake the biggest task in fiction!

HARD TIMES

Across the editorial desk from some unremembered source came a little bit of French allegory

A portrait painter sat in his favorite cafe sipping his wine. His first small bottle finished, he was about to order more when his eye fell on a headline in the Figaro, "Hard Times Are Coming," so instead of ordering his usual second bottle he called for his check.

"Is there anything wrong with the wine?" asked the landlord.

"The wine is good, but I did not order a second bottle because hard times are coming and we must economize," explained the artist.

"Hard times," said the landlord. "Then my wife must not order the silk dress we planned, but must take one of cotton."

"Hard times," repeated the dressmaker when the order was cancelled. "This is no time to expand: I must not make the improvements I had planned in the place."

"Hard times, eh?" said the builder when the dressmaker canceled the building plans. "Then I cannot have my wife's portrait painted."

So he wrote to the artist and cancelled his order.

After receiving the letter the artist went again to his favorite cafe and ordered a small bottle of wine to soothe him. On a nearby chair was the paper in which he had read of hard times two days before. He picked it up to read more closely and found it was two years old

CAMPAIGN CHESTS

Being in the business of making laws, congress can not be expected to come to a realization of a possible situation wherein too many laws exist. To the contrary, the nation's legislative body has shown evidence of not abating its lawmaking rush at one enactment for each purpose.

The senate has passed a "rider" provision which would require wide publicity of contributions to the 1924 presidential campaign. The act would stand in high favor but for the fact we already have compulsory publicity for political contributions. If there has been falsification of campaign expenses it has not been because of the lack of legislation and two laws will afford no relief where one may have failed.

Undoubtedly the senate was actuated by recent disclosures of duplicate contributions from the same sources to both major parties during the Harding-Cox campaign and also of suspiciously generous contributions from big business. Such practices are to be deprecated and if possible abolished but if publicity can accomplish that the condition would not exist since the nation's newspapers have long given much publicity to large political contributions whether national, state or local.

Nation-wide political campaigns involve immense sums of money. There have been few candidates for the presidency in recent years with private fortunes adequate to meet the financial requirements of a presidential campaign. It would take countless small contributions to finance a campaign if the average voter could be persuaded to give his money as well as his vote to his party, but in this the best of campaign managers have always failed. Big business and rich men have financed presidential candidates for government favor or government appointments.

This system has been found obnoxious because government should not discriminate and the public offices should be filled on a basis of qualifications for service rather than of riches. It is evident that the present system must endure until the high cost of campaigning is lowered or the white house shall become attractive to our multi-millionaires.

THE NATION'S WEALTH

Based on figures compiled from Commerce Department reports, the United States is easily the richest country in the world. These reports place the national wealth at $320,803,862,000. The percentage of increase in the decennial period from December 31, 1912 to December 31, 1922 has been 72.2, the national wealth at the close of 1912 being $189,299,664,000.

In the same period the per capita wealth has increased more rapidly than the population. In 1912 the per capita wealth was $1,950 and in 1922 $2,918, an increase of 49.6 percent. This enormous increase in money wealth is, to a certain extent, more apparent than real. Primarily it is due to a rise in prices in recent years and only partly to an actual increase in the quantity of national wealth

According to the classifications of property made by the Department, there has been an increase in value in every class save that of live stock alone. The estimated value of taxed real property and improvements increased from $96,923,106,000 to $155,908,625,000 or 60 9 per cent. Exempt real property, exclusive of national parks and monuments, rose from $12,313,520,000 to $20,505,819,000, or 66.5 per cent.

Stocks of goods, vehicles, other than motor, furniture and clothing rose from $34,334,291,000 to $75,983,607,000, or 121.3 per cent.

Railroads and their equipment rose from $16,148,532,000 to $19,950,800,000, or 23 5 per cent.

Privately owned telephone and transmission enterprises, other than railroads, increased from $9,572,855,000 to $13,607,570,000, or 42.1 per cent.

Manufacturing machinery, tools and implements rose from $6,091,451,000 to $15,753,260,000, or 159 1 per cent, an indication of the industrial expansion of the country.

Farm implements and machinery increased from $1,368,225,000 to $2,603,348,000, or 90.4 per cent

Livestock values slumped from $6,238,389,000 to $5,807,104,000, or 6.9 per cent.

Other increases reported follow: Privately owned water works, from $290,000,000 to $360,885,000 or 24 1 per cent: gold and silver coin and bullion from $2,616,643,000 to $4, 278,155,000, or 63 5 per cent; and the United States navy from $402,352,000 to $1,445,920,000, or 259.4 per cent.

The greatest increase, it will be noted, has been in the navy. Just how real this increase is may be open to dispute. Unless vast sums are regularly invested in new fighting ships and equipment there is bound to be an enormous depreciation. It is true there is a depreciation in all machinery and stocks of goods, but not equal to that in fighting ships.

The above figures also show the strenuous deflation to which farmers have been subjected the last four years. This period of deflation and falling prices is to continue, so Mr. Babson says, for the next twenty years. As agains this, of course, will be a steady and enormous expansion of wealth, so it may be safely predicted that, tremendous as our wealth is today and rapidly as it has increased in the ten-year period noted above, the figures which will be compiled ten years hence showing our wealth at the close of December, 1932, will be equally amazing and equally gratifying to those who believe in this country and its future.

Periods of depression will come so long as we retain and believe in some of our false economic notions, but despite our own ignorance and folly, our people are blest with a wonderful country and there is more good in all of us than bad. Coupling these two facts together gives us ample foundation for optimism and faith in the future material growth of our country.

ABE MARTIN On May

Well, th' season fer th' saw-dust scented, much frequented, circus tented has rolled around agin Year after year these stupendous aggregations with arenic celebrities gathered from th' capitals o' th' world, rare exotic beasts an' birds, an' trained seals, take th' road an' thrill th' same ole countless thousan's, an' hundreds mo' new babies But th' circus has its fans jest th' same as theatrical stock companies, burnt cork minstrelsy, an' other time honored institutions, an' ther allus downtown early on "show day" t' see th' same old "magnificent, new free street demonstration—a solid mile o' glitterin' oriental splender rivalin' th' fete day pageantry o' ancient Rome, etc" We hain't missed but one circus in forty years, an' it didn't show We allus count th' cages, but ther's never fifty as advertised, an' we've never yet caught an' Abyssinian wart hog awake an' on its feet. He's allus gone t' th' hay We learned t' swear watchin' 'em unload a circus. We've seen th' same black Sumatra rhinoceros with th' same circus since he wuz a calf Th' last time we saw him they'd sawed his horn off so he'd fit th' cage. Ringlin's have th' only circus giraffes They die so easy that other circuses seem t' git tired buryin' 'em all th' time, so they don't have 'em. We guess Ringlin's is like th' feller that got married so many times, that said he'd bury 'em as fast as th' good Lord took 'em Some o' th' ole flat back ring horses that come around have been in th' business fer forty years, an' th' pearl o' th' arena is jest as safe on ther backs as she'd be walkin' around Milroy, Indianny. Unlike non-professional horses, they go slower instead o' faster when they're whipped. 'Bout th only difference in circuses is th' number o' elephants, which ranges from three t' thirty. But they all do th' same things. When an elephant gits tired o' th' show business, they shoot him Th' only new thing we've seen with a circus fer years, we seen last year—a bony zebra. If ther's anything in th' world that's round an' plump, its a zebra. They're easy kept an' git no exercise. Th' ole feller stood in th' cage with his head down an' his eyes half closed jest like an' ole fergotten hack horse in front of a soft drink parlor We'll bet if he could have talked, he would have asked about George June an' th' ole Gilmore Zoo Th' same circus had another novelty—th' trained seals wuz brot in th' ring in a wheelbarrow instead of in a push cart.

HOW TO HANDLE TICKLER DIAL IN SET

Must Be Carefully Adjusted to Avoid Poor Results

Just before the tube commences to oscillate, as the tickler or plate variometer is advanced, the volume will increase tremendously for an instant and terminate in a sharp click or slopping thump, depending on how slowly the regeneration is increased. After this has taken place you will be able to hear the carrier wave whistles of the broadcasting stations and the flute like notes of the CW amateur code stations

The music or speech that you have been listening to will become fuzzy and muffled unless you are exactly on "zero beat" or in the middle of the two whistles, one on each side of the broadcasting wave. There are in reality no whistles until the wave generated by your oscillating detector tube combines or heterodynes with the wave of the broadcasting station.

The drawback to this method of reception is that it causes a wave of energy to be radiated from the antenna of your set that will carry for miles around and interfere with other receiving sets that are trying to tune in on the same station. In a region where there are very few receiving sets in use this method of reception is practical Where two or more regenerative sets are located near each other and are being tuned into the same station, with both in an oscillating state, a third receiver will be unable to hear anything but squeals and whistles.

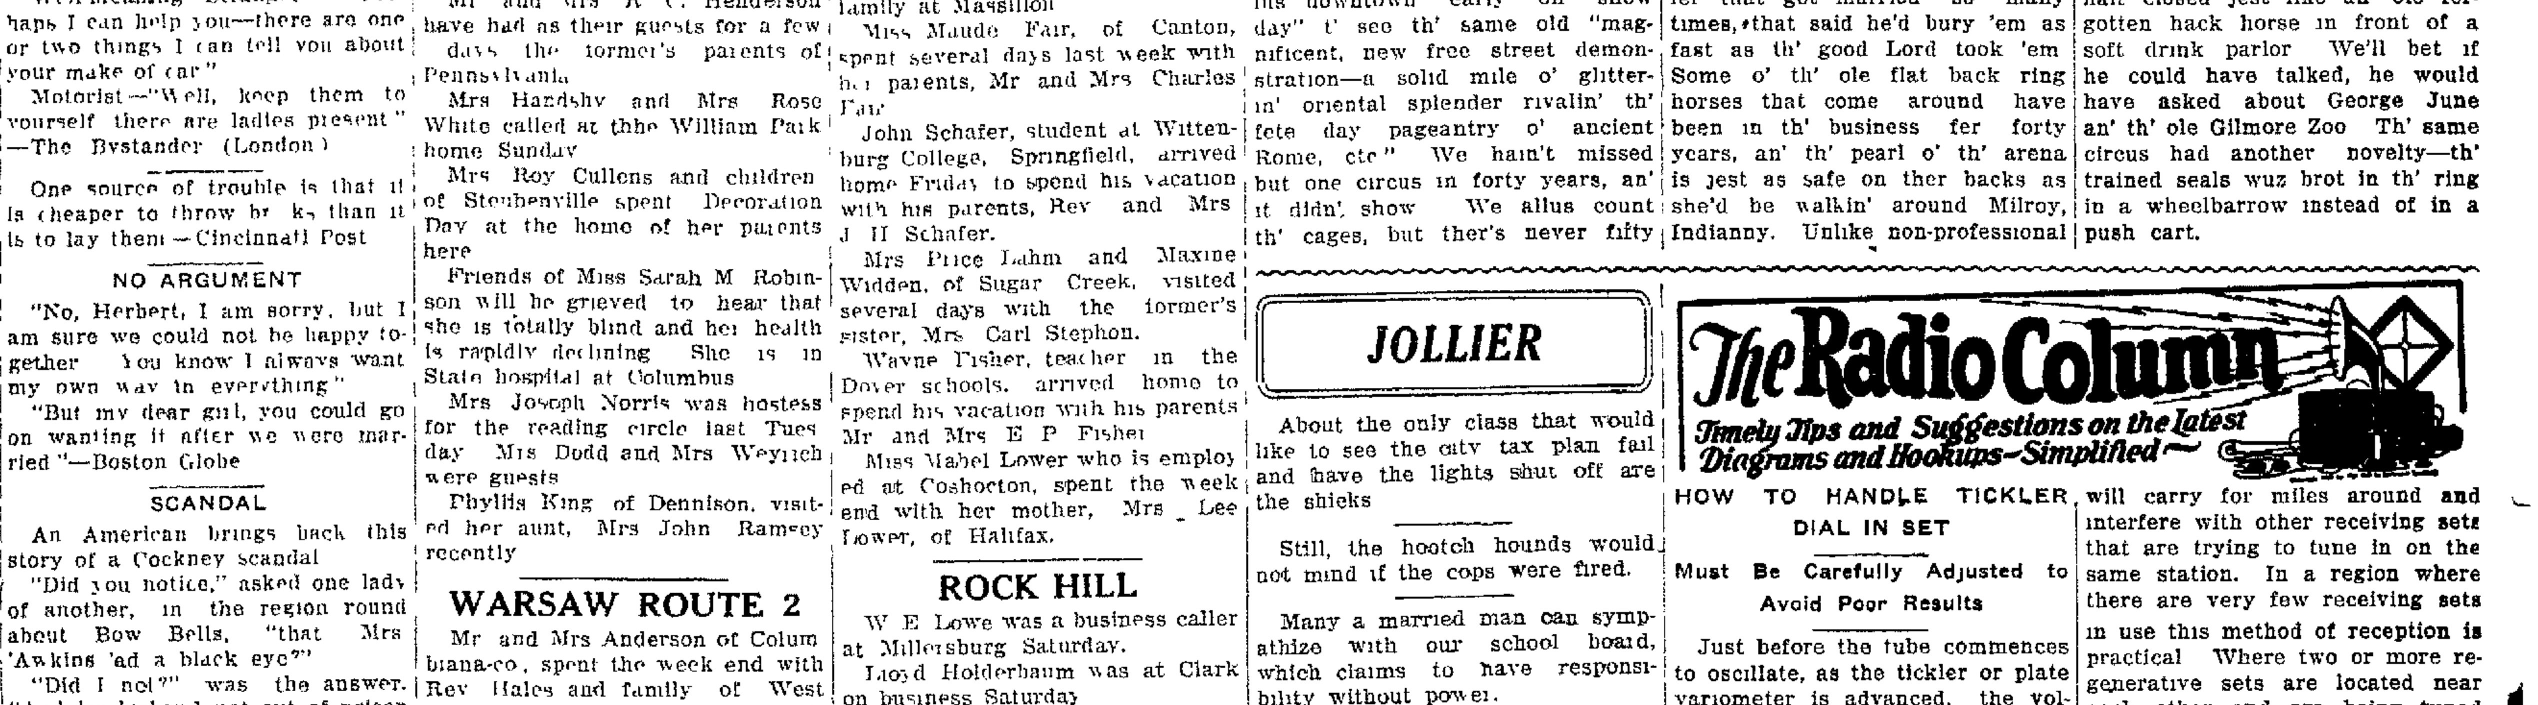

Reduce the setting of the detector rheostat or the tickler dial until you again hear a click and the music will become clear. Now carefully advance the tickler dial just up to the point, beyond which the tube will break into oscillation A regenerative set should never be operated with the detector tube in an oscillating state due to the interference caused with surrounding receivers

68th Congress Was Turbulent

WASHINGTON, June 7—Thrown out of its beaten pathway by a Democratic-insurgent coalition, the sixty-eighth congress faced adjournment of its first session tonight with a record certain to provide the dominating issues of the coming presidential campaign.

Clashes with President Coolidge, sensational disclousures of alleged corruption in public office and the repeated defeat of the administration on fiscal policies featured sessions replete with turbulent debate, factional strife and scandal.

In session only six months, the congress forced two cabinet officers to resign, administered extraordinary defeats to the pet policies of two other cabinet members, and utterly ignored the legislative recommendations of the president.

Altho the Republican party held a paper majority, the congress was dominated by insurgent progressive blocs which paid allegiance to Senator Robert M LaFollette, Republican, of Wisconsin. The LaFollette followers held a "balance of power" and their usual course was to combine with the Democrats in opposing the Coolidge administration.

The outstanding legislative achievements were the new revenue bill, the soldiers' adjusted compensation bill and the new immigration act with its Japanese exclusion clause. All three measures, passed by one-sided majorities, were written into law over the vigorous protest of the president. In enacting the bonus, the congress even passed it over a presidential veto.

Passage of the new revenue act, with its Democratic tax schedules, came as a flat repudiation of the administration's fiscal policies and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon's own plan for tax reduction.

Because of the prominence of these investigations, others suffered an eclipse. But included in the senate's list were inquiries into international propaganda, the veterans' bureau, the Bok peace award, alleged Texas land frauds, the election of U. S. Senator Mayfield, Democrat, of Texas, charges against U. S. Senator Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, acting Daugherty "Prosecutor" and into affairs of the internal revenue bureau. The senate acted in only one—when it voted an acquittal on all charges to Senator Wheeler.

The house had two major investigations, one into activities of the U. S. shipping board, the other into government land grants to the Northern Pacific railroad. Neither resulted in legislative action.

Enactment of thhe Japanese exclusin clause was in effect a repudiation of Secretary of State Hughes who earnestly protested against it.

The sixty eighth congress, however, achieved an investigating record second to none in histor and one which practically overshadowed its legislative activity. Fully a score of investigations into government department and federal activities were under way at one time the highest peaks were reached by enate committees in thhe Teapot ome and department of justice investigations each of which resulted in thhe ousting of a cabinet member.

In thhe former, Secretary of the Navy Denby resigned after the senate passed a resolution demanding his dismissal. In the latter, President Coolidge was forced to demand the resignation of attorney General augherty while a resolution to that effect was pending in the senate.

Prohibitionists Choose Faris to Head Ticket

COLUMBUS, June 7. H. P. Faris, Clinton, Mo., banker, is the prohibition party's candidate for president today. The vice presidential nominee is Miss Marie C. Brehm, Long Beach, Calif. These candidates were chosen at the closing session of the prohibition national convention here late Friday.

After being defeated in the contest for the presidential nomination, Rev. A. P. Gouthey, Seattle, Wash., was declared nominated for vice president by acclamation. A delegate, however, questioned the legality of the procedure, claiming the vice presidential nomination should be made by ballot.

The declaration of Gouthey's nomination then was recalled and names presented. Balloting for vice president resulted: Gouthey polled 73 1-2 votes, Miss Brehm, 22 1-2, Col. Alfred L. Moudey, Sullivan, Ind. 7 votes.

Tone Up All Your Muscles to Win Slim Beauty Lines

By LUCREZIA BORI

The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

THE "slim, straight line" has been drummed into our ears so steadily for the past few seasons by fashion writers and [illegible] experts that women have become aware of the fact that they must achieve this line—or consider themselves old-fashioned and unattractive.

Now don't be misled by this statement to the extent of thinking that the figure which possesses slender, graceful curves is not the figure to be desired. Our standards of womanly beauty have not changed to this degree.

The woman whose figure shows slender, graceful curves, slight curves, but well-moulded ones, is the one who looks well in the smart slim frocks. You don't want to become perfectly straight-chested and absolutely devoid of hips. You want graceful, attractive curves in the right places, for you realize that the perfect womanly figure is not altogether straight of line, and you are not intended to take the straight-line creed quite literally.

Indeed, I think women have made wonderful strides in achieving the perfect figure during the past few years.

Gone are the mincing steps and the pinched-in waists that used to be considered the earmarks of beauty and fashion. Women hold their shoulders back and swing along with the graceful free stride of unself-conscious boys.

Now, I spoke of curves coming in the place where curves are meant to be. The most unfortunate of the undesirable curving lines I consider the curve above the abdomen. If there is anything that spoils the graceful boyishness of the slim, youthful figure, it is a protruding stomach where the muscles should be well toned and firm so that they hold the abdomen perfectly flat.

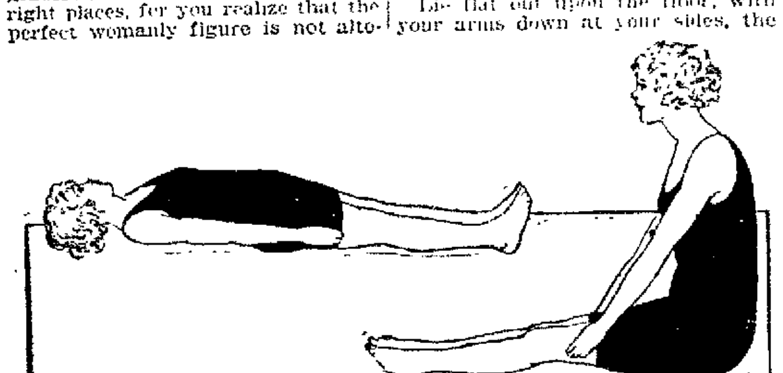

One of the causes of this wrongly-placed curve is poor carriage. When the chest is allowed to slump in the natural result is a curving out of the abdominal muscles.

If you remember to hold your chest out and your chin in, your abdomen will take care of itself. But it will be more able to do so if you impart tone and firmness to your abdominal muscles by correct exercise. Try this exercise every night and morning in your own room.

Lie flat out upon the floor, with your arms down at your sides, the palms of your hands in toward your body.

The exercise is simply to raise yourself to a sitting position without putting your hands upon the floor to assist your body in rising. Simply allow your hands to slide down along your legs, palms in. Do not touch them to the floor.

In this way there is considerable pull upon your abdominal muscles, which imparts tone and the coveted straight line.

Lie Flat Like This, Then Slowly Rise to This Position.

The Way Madge Forced Mamie to Tell the Truth.

MAMIE'S calm declaration that she knew nothing concerning the costly fur coats that Katie had brought from their concealment in our attic staggered me for a second or two. Could it be possible that Katie——?

One look at my little maid's convulsed face and eyes frenzied with anger convinced me, however, that Mamie, not she, was the one telling falsehoods, and I turned to the girl with a sternness aggravated by her effrontery.

"That is something very easily settled," I said, feeling a trifle like Solomon of old. "I shall telephone the police at once, and ask them to take these coats and find out from whom they've been stolen.

Katie's face changed swiftly to impish glee, and she clapped her hands joyously.

"Dot's de stoof, Missis Graham!" she cried. "I no care how qveeck you go to polis, for I have nodings doing mit dose tings."

I looked at Mamie steadily. Her face was a shade paler than before, but her eyes met mine defiantly.

"I don't think you dare do that," she said impudently. "They're in your attic, not anywhere else. May be the police ask you some questions."

I rose abruptly. I guessed that the girl's impertinence was only a mask for desperate terror, but she must not be permitted any further license of speech.

"You may go now," I said sternly. "Katie, bring those coats downstairs and unwrap them, while I get the Southampton police station on the telephone. I want to give them a description of each garment."

Mamie shot furtive glances first at me and then at the bundles Katie was gathering up. Her lips parted as if to speak and a lump in her throat twitched convulsively, but she did not say anything, only walked out of the door as I had bidden her.

"Oh, I'll Tell!"

Katie looked at me with dumb [illegible] the lower floor, [illegible] I was [illegible] Mamie's [illegible] I spent years [illegible] of [illegible]. She would bluff [illegible] the very last second and I pretended to [illegible] opened and closed the [illegible] she was standing [illegible] of it instead of on the veranda.

I was afraid that Katie would betray her knowledge of the [illegible] little maid kept her face [illegible] lutely expressionless, and I took down the telephone receiver, carefully shielding the [illegible] with my body that Mamie might not know my hand was holding down the hook, making a connection impossible. I smiled grimly to myself at the absurd game of wits with this alien girl in which Katie's folly had engaged me.

"Is this the Southampton police station?" I asked, as if I were actually talking to the chief at the other end of the wire, "Yes? Then will you please send one of your men at once to ——"

A little choking scream behind me and an exclamation of triumph from Katie made me turn quickly. Mamie was running toward me with outstretched hands and working face.

"Oh, I'll tell!" she sobbed. "I'll tell everything, if you won't have the police come."

I turned back to the telephone, spoke quickly.

A Calculating Instant.

"Never mind now," I said. "I find I do not need an officer. If I do later, I will call you."

Replacing the receiver on the hook I turned to the weeping Mamie. All the pity I might otherwise have felt for the girl had been submerged by her mean little attempt to throw the blame of her act upon Katie.

"If you do not tell me the truth," I said sternly, "and you may be sure I shall know if you are not telling it, I shall call that policeman back at once. You are a very wicked girl to try to put the blame for your acts upon Katie."

"I paid her to hide them," Mamie retorted sullenly. "She must have known there was something funny about it."

"Und now I gif your dirty money back!" Katie shrilled, flourishing the ten-dollar bill I had given her to return to Mamie. I silenced my gesticulating little maid with a look, and held out my hand for the money which she gave me.

"How much did you give Katie?" I asked.

She looked speculatively at both of us, and I saw that her cunning brain was debating the possibility of extorting some extra money from Katie. But I held her eyes steadily with mine and after a minute she spoke sullenly.

"Ten dollars."

YOUR HEALTH

Cleanliness and Care Saves Baby from Marasmus

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,

United States Senator from New York,

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND

SUMMER is a trying time for every one of us, but I think the poor little babies suffer most of all.

One of the diseases most commonly found among babies in the Summer is marasmus. This is a wasting disease. Instead of gaining weight as a healthy baby should, there is a steady loss of weight.

The baby suffering from marasmus presents a pitiable appearance. While there is steady loss of weight, the bones grow and the teeth develop. There is such thinness as to produce almost the appearance of a skeleton. The veins show through the tightly-drawn or sagging skin. The expression of the victim is that of an old man.

As the disease progresses, many other characteristic symptoms are noticed. The abdomen is distended, producing the condition commonly called "pot belly." Examination shows the distension to be due to the formation of gas.

Pneumonia and gastric disturbances are complications often found. The pneumonia is easily developed on account of the chills and profuse perspiration which almost always accompany this disease.

Just what causes marasmus, we do not know. Some authorities believe it is due to an infection. Others think it is due to improper intestinal action caused by change in the food. Still others feel that auto-intoxication, brought on by a hyperacidity, is the basic cause of all the trouble.

Whatever the underlying reason may be, everyone agrees that marasmus is a condition which must not be neglected.

The treatment should be followed exactly as the doctor prescribes.

Great care must be taken of the diet. If possible to give it, breast feeding is the best means of restoring the child to health. If this is not possible, then a formula which approaches mother's milk as nearly as possible will be ordered by your doctor.

I want to give you some advice about the general care of the sick child.

Keep the baby warmly covered in a room well-ventilated and having sunshine, if possible.

To avoid chilling, keep hot-water bottles at the feet, and cover the little hands with mittens in cold weather. Unless the extremities are well-protected there is apt to be additional chilling.

After the daily bath, which should be given with the utmost care, the body should be gently rubbed with warm olive oil.

Change the position of the child frequently. Remember that the skin is thin and sensitive, and so there is a tendency to bed sores.

Keep the bed and diapers dry. Dust the buttocks with some soothing powder, such as equal parts of talcum, starch and stearate of zinc.

You will feel well-rewarded by the child's improvement, if you will follow these simple rules.

CONTRASTING-MATERIAL CLOTHES

Novel Trimmings Make Up for Very Simple Lines in Frocks and Coats

Satin and Moire in Two Shades of Blue Make This Evening Gown.

This Coat Shows Stripes of Glace Leather and Broadcloth in Blue and Green.

By ANNETTE BRADSHAW

THE garments of the season are straight and simple of line, it is true. But this does not mean that they are devoid of trimming notes.

Because of their simplicity the smarter garments turn to new mediums to make them unusual. One of the most effective is the combination of contrasting materials. Sometimes these combine two colors, and then again they use two shades of the same color.

Examples of both treatments are seen above.

The evening gown alternates horizontal stripes of lighter blue satin and darker blue moire, finishing its length with long, silk fringe of lighter blue.

The coat combines stripes of broadcloth in dark blue with stripes of soft glace leather in a blending green tone. Soft brown Summer ermine finishes the garment.

The sheer Summer materials are also used in effective combinations. We see such mediums as voile and linen combined, or gaily embroidered voile used in combination with voile in a plain shade. A frock of the latter type has its bodice made of plain white embroidered in colors and its skirt of white voile, finely pleated.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT To Be or Not to Be Bobbed

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

DEAR WINIFRED BLACK:

This bobbed hair situation is certainly getting on my nerves. I don't care who gets their hair bobbed except my wife, with whom I have been living for the past eighteen years.

When we were in our prime her hair was what charmed me most, and it still does.

Now she tells me that she must have her hair bobbed. It is impossible for her to get a new hat that will fit her with her hair as it is.

Admitting that I don't know a thing about women's styles of clothes, it seems to me that they wouldn't quit making hats for long-haired women entirely. In fact, I am under the impression that our bobbed-haired neighbors have influenced her to spoof me along, and she is doing it just to make me say, "Yes, go on and bob your hair!"

Could you advise me if she can get a hat that will fit her with her hair done up?

Sincerely,

FRANK J. A.

There's That Old Hat

Winifred Black

HARK from the tomb a doleful sound!

Poor man, how tragic you are about it!

And to think you don't even believe her when she tells you that nice little tale about the new hats.

How can you think that she is "spoofing" you?

Just cast your eye on some of the hats in some of the windows, Mr. Man, and see if you think any woman with a real head of real hair could get one of them on to save her life.

The average hat is made this year for bobbed hair. There's no getting around that fact. Of course, if your wife will really hunt she can find a hat she can wear with long hair, but for goodness' sake, if she really wants a bob why not let her have it?

And—whisper—honestly now, between you and me, just exactly what do you mean when you say she's trying to get you to let her bob her hair?

Do you really imagine that it is up to you to tell your wife how to dress and how to have her hair cut?

Of course she ought to want to please you and she probably does.

That's just the reason she wants her hair cut. She's afraid she doesn't look as young as she might, and—cross your heart now and tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth!—has she ever seen you having a nice, cozy, little chat with a girl with a bob?

Isn't there some little bobbed-haired damsel you rather admire—think now!—that may be what's at the bottom of the whole business?

And even if it isn't, for goodness' sake, Man, don't tell it that you think you really have the right "to let" your wife do this, that or the other thing any more than she has a right to "let" you or "let you not," as the case may be.

Do you consult her when you get your hair cut? Do you wear the sort of clothes she likes, or do you buy what suits you and let her rave on?

Where's that old hat that you insist on wearing? Hasn't she told you a dozen times that she wished you'd burn it up?

Have you burnt it?

Not you, and you don't intend to do it, either! Why shouldn't she write a letter to the papers about that hat?

What Is Your Verdict?

Seriously, though, what a great fuss the men do make about the way women dress—and don't dress.

And this bob—you'd think the whole fate of the family depended upon the way a woman combed her hair.

Between you and me, I don't care to see a woman past the early twenties with bobbed hair—but that's my affair—it's the way I feel about it.

The way the other woman feels is her business.

I wouldn't waste my breath or my patience or my good disposition fretting about the bob.

Let her do as she wishes and nine chances to one you'll think she's a picture when she comes home with her hair cut.

And that's my verdict.

What do you think about it, Neighbor?

Three-Minute Journeys

By Temple Manning

WHERE WOMEN GO SHOPPING ON MOTORCYCLES.

BRITTANY is but a few hours from Paris, and yet—how different it is! It is one of those delightfully enchanting parts of France into which one can retire after spending energy as well as time in the gay capital or the Riviera, and be sure of peace and quiet.

And one may be certain that Brittany will be the same every time he visits it, for Brittany does not change with years. Even the dress of its women remains the same. There is no trace of the Parisian modiste here.

A tight black bodice, a full skirt yards wide, starched white apron and cap with blue and red, green and purple trimmings everywhere—these make up the costume of the Bretonne. Brittany does revel in colors! A brilliant coat or waistcoat may commonly be seen even on a dignified elderly Breton gentleman.

Bretons are as conservative in their costumes and faiths as they are in their dress. Not until the seventeenth century could they be persuaded to desert paganism and accept Christianity, and even today belief in witchcraft and fairies still lingers in the hearts of the people.

Its folk-songs, folk-dances and folk-tales remain, treasured by the true Breton. And there are few more interesting sights in Brittany than that of an old Breton sitting on his doorstep reciting to the many children who eagerly surround him stories which are the heritage of every generation.

Strange as it may seem, Brittany has accepted—from the outside world—the motorcycle. It is, indeed, one of the common means of transportation today. On market day, particularly, the tourist must beware. For down the many hillsides motorcycles will come whizzing by—and seated thereon will be Bretonnes on their shopping tours.

But not even the popping of a motorcycle can upset the restful peace and calm of Brittany!

She Speeds to Town.

THE HOME KITCHEN

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON

The Authority on Home Cooking

The Salad Plate-Luncheon.

THE salad plate-luncheon is rather a new idea and one well worthy the housewife's serious consideration. Heavy luncheons are not appreciated on hot days and are a lot of extra work, which makes having guests a matter of painful endeavor, instead of the pleasure it should be.

First, a cold clam broth or a jellied tomato or chicken broth, or an iced melon may be offered. Then plates of bread and butter sandwiches, cut thin, olives, sweet pickles, iced tea or tea punch, and the salad-plates should follow. Each plate may contain five salad mixtures served on lettuce leaves, and in the centre, in a lettuce-cup, a half-dozen little rosy radishes.

One salad may be fish mixture, one a potato salad, one a chicken or sweetbread salad, one asparagus or mixed vegetables and the fifth may be a jellied salad. These salad-plates may be followed by an old-fashioned strawberry shortcake. All of the salads should be prepared in the morning early, in bowls which may be placed in the ice-box until needed. Only the dressings have to be added. The shortcake may also be made and set aside. Lettuce and relishes washed and set to chill can be made ready in a minute. The buttered sandwiches should be made, covered with a damp, linen cloth and placed in a cool place until it is time to serve them.

The table should be simply laid with Chinese straw, painted oilcloth, unbleached linen or other doilies quite as simple. Decorations may be of available flowers of the sweet, pickable kind, which are never too gay in color to be inharmonious when prettily combined. This sort of luncheon is especially suitable for your womans' club, graduation classmates, the card-club farewell of the season or just for a social affair. The very daintiness of the luncheon appeals to women and it is quite hearty enough for the mid-day meal as each salad is dressed with a suitable dressing that is rich and substantial. If liked, the sandwiches can be made of whole-wheat and white slices together, or of gluten and white bread. Some prefer Boston brown bread lightly spread with cheese, but plain bread and [illegible] more suitable for the mixed [illegible].

[illegible] making vegetable salads it is better to use vegetables that have been cooked at home rather than canned or bottled macedoine mixtures. Cook those grown above ground in fast-boiling water, uncovered, to keep their color, cooking them tender but not soft. Those grown underground should be cooked well covered, in enough fast-boiling water to cover them, with a little salt added.

In making fish salads, freshly-boiled, home-cooked fish makes a lighter and daintier salad than the canned fish, the texture of which is made firmer and more solid by the canning process. The chickens should be boiled the day before. The white meat may be used for the salad, while the dark meat may be creamed for family use. Skin, bones and trimmings should be thrown into the water the chickens were boiled in to make a good strong bouillon, or into the regular soup-stock pot.

The jellied salad may be made with a jelly foundation and may be poured over deviled eggs that are highly seasoned and placed in a cup mould to be jellied. In making the potato salad, if the onion is grated the salad will be more delicate. A pleasing addition is a seeded cucumber diced or minced fine, which gives a very pleasant flavor with the right dressing. This may be a boiled dressing or a mayonnaise made with the addition of one stiffly-beaten egg white and a little heavy cream, no mustard being used.

Another salad that may be used is made of about a quarter of a pound of calf's liver boiled and finely minced, blended with cream cheese, onion juice, pepper, salt, a tiny bit of sugar to remove the raw flavor of the onion and enough well-seasoned mayonnaise to make a paste, so that small balls can be made of the mixture. Four or five of the balls placed on a lettuce leaf are sufficient as they are very rich and flavorful.

In making the shortcake use the biscuit dough and save enough of the juice to add to a cupful and a half of light sugar syrup in order to provide extra juice in serving.

Good Night Stories

By Blanche Silver

Illustrated by Neva Harrison

PEGGY LEARNS SOMETHING NEW ABOUT WILD FLOWERS.

"OH, oh, oh! You pretty thing!" Peggy exclaimed, running down the road to the beautiful pink flowers which were for all the world like painted steeples on a church. "My, but you are pretty. I wonder what you are and whether you'll poison my hands if I touch you."

"Goodness, no," laughed a tiny voice, and Squeedee, the wee elfin from Makebelieve Land, scrambled out from under the leaves, where he had been sleeping. "Mrs. Hardhack never harms any one, do you, Mrs. Hardhack?"

"No," laughed the pink blossom, "but I may if you keep calling me Mrs. Hardhack. Of course, that's my name, but so many people call me Steeple-Bush, and I like that name much better. I wish every one would call me Mrs. Steeple-Bush."

"Then you shall have your wish," laughed Peggy. "I'll tell everybody I know who you are, and before long they'll forget the other harsh name. Isn't it queer! I thought you looked like painted church steeples the second I saw you. Your blossoms look like church steeples in the twilight sun. My, but you're pretty," and Peggy ran her hand over the pretty cluster of pink blossoms from the top of the steeple to the bottom. "Why are your blossoms at the top turning brown?"

"Because they are older than the ones near the bottom," replied Squeedee. "You see, Mrs. Steeple-Bush always blooms from the top down, don't you, Mrs. Steeple-Bush?"

"Yes, indeed, though for no reason at all, that I know of. I've always let my top blossoms unfold first."

"Gracious!" Peggy exclaimed, as her hand touched one of the dark-green, oval, saw-edged leaves. "Why are all these hairs on the under side of your leaves? To keep ants and crawling things off?"

"You Shall Have Your Wish."

"No, indeed," laughed Mrs. Steeple-Bush, merrily. "I couldn't do without my ant friends. But you see we grow in such low, moist ground that the pores on the under side of my leaves would soon be filled with moisture and I'd choke to death if those hairs weren't there to protect them.

"You children breathe through your lungs, but we steeple-bushes breathe through the pores on our leaves. If the vapors that arise from the moist ground underneath me should clog up the pores on my leaves I'd soon die. That's why the under side of my leaves is hairy. You'd never think, to look at me, that I'm Miss Meadow-Sweet's cousin, would you?

"No, I would not," laughed Peggy, softly, "but I think Miss Meadow-Sweet is pretty, too. I wonder if you'd object to my gathering a few of your steeples and taking them home to Mother?"

"Goodness, no," said Squeedee, "but be careful when you pick them, not to tear the stems. Mrs. Steeple-Bush is very generous."

"I try to be," laughed the pretty flower. "Help yourself."

Peggy picked two of the pink steeples, then she and Squeedee ran back to the house to show them to her mother.

VIOLET.

VIOLET: I wonder whether you are not a little self-conscious when you meet the type of man [illegible].

Stop being self-conscious and self-centered. Stop being afraid you're going to remain single for the rest of your life. Become interested in people and don't be timid for fear that they will think you bold. Everyone who is alive and alert is interested in others. You have personality, your letter shows it. So don't shrink, Violet. Just come out of your place of hiding and let the world know you are here.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a young woman in my teens and have been married but am separated now.

I love my husband, but he doesn't care for me.

He seems to care for his parents more than he does for me. He has chosen them in preference to me.

Please tell me what to do. Should we get a divorce?

BROKEN-HEARTED WIFE: There is no reason why your husband cannot love both you and his parents. Marriage ties cannot be made and broken so lightly. Go to him. Make him love you as he did before you married—make him want you and need you, and bring happiness into his life as well as your own.

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her in care of this office.
